RHD STUDENT WORKSHOPS

2016

Post-Conference Sunday Morning Workshops

Why Methodology Matters 9am - 10:30am

Presented by Associate Professor Liz Mackinlay

Answering this fundamental question requires the researcher to create a thread that links an understanding of epistemology with choices of methodology and beyond. Associate Professor Liz Mackinlay will provide insight into method and methodological choices in this practical workshop that will leave participants with a clearer understanding of their identity as researcher.

Participants are invited to bring a brief sentence describing their project and their research questions to the session. This session will be beneficial for students at any stage in their candidature.

The Ethical Considerations of Research 11am - 12pm

In a companion session to the previous workshop, the ethical considerations of undertaking research will be explored. Again designed to provide practical understanding and insight into the research process the workshop will cater for students at any stage of their research.

October Workshops

Working with Qualitative data, Saturday 1st October 10am – 12pm

Presented by Dr Sam Sellar and Professor Bob Lingard

This workshop will focus on qualitative interview data and will examine the questions of what are data, what data should be selected and collected, how to understand the interview situation, how to analyse the data, and how to represent the data. The workshop will involve presentations by Sam and Bob, as well as time for: (1) practical data analysis activities in groups; (2) discussion about different ways of working with data; and (3) discussion of some contemporary issues in qualitative research. While the focus will be on interview data, the issues covered will also have relevance for students working with other forms of qualitative data. Two required readings will be provided to participants ahead of the workshop.
